tenses which take into account the speaker's attitude regarding his statements. Finally, the author address a delicate problem : are second tenses temporally and aspectually neutral ?

- A recapitulative table presents a diachronic summary of second tenses evolution regarding aspect, mode, tense, from Middle Egyptian to Coptic.
- Annex 1 presents i-sdm.f and i-iri.f sdm forms in cleft sentences, and annex 2 contains a list of occurrences, classified according to the rhematized adjunct, an index of quoted passages, a grammatical index, an index of Egyptian and Coptic words, and a comprehensive bibliography.
